Picnic-ers Give Real Enjoyable Concert

The "Nocturn" choir of Rivercourt, under the leadership of Mr. Andrew Ashmore, were visitors to Wainwright on Sunday last, and enjoyed their annual picnic by the shores of Mott Lake in the park.

During the afternoon and evening, this splendid aggregation of Nordic singers, who in their daily intercourse are just ordinary folks like you and me, very graciously entertained the large crowd of visitors to the lake with splendidly rendered vocal numbers; these being given in both English and Norwegian.

The privilege of hearing such sweet and correctly-interpreted renditions was greatly appreciated by all. We understand that this noted choir is much in demand in their own territory, which is not surprising when it is noted that a number of them are quite talented.

The choir is drawn from a wide area of local farmers of the McLaughlin and Rivercourt districts, and will be sure to be welcomed for a return visit at any time, with their voices of sweetness and charm.

Board of Trade Sends Telegram to Prime Minister

In co-operation with many other bodies throughout the west, the Wainwright Board of Trade sent the following telegram to Ottawa at the week end, stressing the need for the lifting of the grain export embargo.

Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister, Ottawa.—To ensure welfare of the west and farmers to reap any benefit it is essential that crop be marketed at a profit. Any price less than last year's pegged price will have disastrous effect on farm industry. Nineteen thirty-eight price must be pegged same or higher to ensure workable returns to our farmers throughout the west.

W. A. KNOWLES
Secretary, Wainwright Board of Trade.

Mr. Harden Still In Coma at Hospital

Mr. Arnold Harden, who was injured so badly in the car accident some two weeks ago at Phillips and taken to Viking hospital, was still unconscious on Sunday last, although in talking with the doctor in charge of the case hopes are expressed for the patient's recovery.

His wife, we learn, is recovering nicely and plans to stay soon with friends in Viking. She has made rapid strides in her recovery from so serious injuries as she suffered. Their daughter, Ruth, has almost recovered from head injuries, but is confined to hospital owing to having a badly fractured leg and arm.

The responsibility for the accident has not yet been determined. Both car and truck were fully insured and the adjusters have the matter in hand awaiting Mr. Harden's recovery.

It is singular that several other accidents have occurred at almost the same place on the highway during the past ten days. No apparent reason can be given for these (which have resulted in three deaths) except without any serious personal injuries) as the highway seems to be in as good condition there as elsewhere.

Wainwright Industry Is Still Expanding

It will possibly be worth-while to note that the local industry commonly termed "The Star Office" is continuing to expand, this regard to the publications issuing from this office. Commencing with the August number of the magazine, "The Alberta Oddfellows", which is the provincial newspaper of the I.O.O.F. organization, will be owned, printed and published by the editor of The Star.

This, of course, all means further publicity for our town and, in addition, will add its quota in making "Wainwright" and "The Star" real household words in the printing and publishing world.

Abolish Bond on Canadian Cars

Canadian tourists visiting the United States have been granted an important concession by the customs authorities south of the border.

Now, through regulations brought into effect this month, Canadian motorists will be granted exemption from the requirement of posting a bond if they wish to remain in the United States during a period up to six months.

Official word of the new regulation giving exemption to Canadian motorists has been received by officials of the Alberta Motor Association, from the Canadian Automobile Association, with which the A.M.A. is affiliated. Request for the exemption was made by a number of Canadian motor clubs.

Last summer, it may be recalled, arrangements were made between the two countries whereby tourists making brief visits across the border were permitted to return with $100 worth of articles free of duty.

Now, with the new six months' permit system in operation, the way has been opened for great development of tourist traffic between the two countries.

More Honors for Mr. Joe E. Hill

Congratulations are in order for Mr. Joe E. Hill, of the Rowdell Stock Farm, who has just returned from the Edmonton, Calgary and Red Deer fairs with his string of Percheron horses. During the various showings he captured 1st prize, made up of 4 firsts, 4 seconds and 4 thirds besides capturing the grand championship for the best pure bred mare with Dorothy Dean. Her first sister, Dorothy Dix, captured the reserve grand championship at Edmonton.

The beautiful black 15-year-old Marna was first for brood mares, being still undefeated, while her stallion colt won the coveted red ribbon.

Dorothy Dix and Dorothy Dean won 1st in progeny classes for the pet of one sire and dam. These winners were first bred by Mr. Hill's well known old stud horse, (True Blue).

All these mares, and also the lovely Peggy M, are being bred to Messrs. Mitchell and Heth's imported stallion, Mazon, sired by Mazon and out of the wonderful mare Beulah K. It is only a matter of time until Wainwright and district will have the best of blood lines to breed to.

These are the most important horse prizes ever brought to this district and all the animals were raised here by Mr. Hill and such a commendable showing at these important fairs reflects great credit on his ability as a breeder and raiser of Percheron animals.

"Star" Interests Metiskow Guides

Something entirely different, and without educational as well as entertaining, was the expressed opinion of a party of Girl Guides who, under the chaperonage of Mrs. Florence Williams, came over from Metiskow on Tuesday to pay a visit to The Star office, and to learn "what makes the wheels go round".

The party was taken step by step through the whole modus operandi of the manner in which The Star is produced, from the gathering of the news, putting it into type, making the type ready for the printing press, and the printing, folding and mailing of the finished product. All thoroughly enjoyed the adventure.

During the balance of the day, the young ladies enjoyed a picnic dinner at a short notice. Packed by the waters of Mott Lake, as well as a visit to the animal enclosure to view the buffalo, elk, etc., and after a camp-fire sing-song in the evening returned to their homes happy, amused and edified.

Paralysis Cases Growing in Alberta

From what can be learned from reliable sources, the number of cases of the dread disease, infantile paralysis continues to grow in Alberta, and these three deaths have occurred from it despite every effort to save the lives of the patients.

Word from the Health department at Edmonton says that "polio", as it is usually called by doctors, is a terrible disease and naturally terrifies parents. Because of this terror, people who are in districts where the disease is prevalent will grasp at any suggested method of prevention. So little is known of the method of spread of this disease that "silly" suggestions have been offered for prevention, but most of these have proved useless. General hygienic measures are probably useful.

Wainwright Folks At Coast Annual

Under the towering evergreens of Stanley Park in Vancouver, residents and former residents of Edmonton, numbering 1,100, gathered one afternoon recently to celebrate the twelfth annual picnic of the Edmonton-Vancouver Association. Of the 1,100, 400 were summer visitors to Vancouver.

Welcoming the guests was Mr. Gerald V. Pilon, a former Edmontonian, while rapidly on behalf of the visitors was Rev. W. M. Grant, D.D., pastor of Metropolitan church who is preaching at Hyerson United Church in Vancouver during July.

Knots of gray-haired men and women, chatting happily under the tall, shaggy trees, dominated Edmonton "the eighties" when the city was a Hudson Bay trading post of between 200 and 300 people. Among the picknickers was pioneer Tommy Lauder whose father built the first frame house in Edmonton in 1881 after he had brought his family from Winnipeg by Red River cart, a trip that took three and one half months.

Quite a number of former Wainwright citizens were included in this congregation of former Albertans too, among whom may be mentioned the Crampsons, Waltons, Agnewes, Janssens, Dickins, Dolphins, Dunsmores, Sucklings, Hornes, Juras, McLeods, Goulets and innumerable others; and it goes without saying that "All had a real good time!"

Red River Shows Play Wainwright

All the fun of the fair (and indeed there was lots of it!) was given to crowds of folk from town and country on Monday and Tuesday of this week, the occasion being a 2-day stand of the Red River Shows which is filling an itinerary from Winnipeg to the Coast.

Under the capable management of Mr. H. C. Kennedy, of Winnipeg, the special train over the C.N.R. was quickly and efficiently unloaded early on Monday morning, to the great delight of the youngsters of town, and shortly after noon everything was away to a good start.

With a 2-street midway comprised of side-shows, games, rides and what-have-you and a packed throng of eager pleasure seekers, the "Red River" things lively till the small hours of the morning, and the whole affair proved quite a diversion from the hum-drum of everyday life in our midst.

Vivid Action In Prize Fight Picture

Basically, the film "Kid Galahad" is a prizefight melodrama. There is also a vivid dash of the conflict of triangular romance, emotion-stirring action and some of the better qualities of a gripping gangster story. Comedy has been incorporated into dialogue, situations and action. The leading roles are in the hands of such capable players as Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, the newcomer William Haade, and another young chap, Wayne Morris, who established himself as a personality to be considered in future production.

Nick Donati, fight manager, to whom the roar of the crowd is dear, dreams of discovering a fighter whom he can develop into a champion. He comes upon one accidentally when bellboy Galahad knocks out "Chump McGraw" of the rival manager, Turkey Morgan.

Donati becomes a man of fury when he thinks that not only is secretary, Fluff, in love with his protégé, but that the boy is in love with his sister, Marie. He sends the boy into the ring to take a beating in the real fight. For half the way Galahad, following Donati's treacherous instructions, takes a fearful beating. But Fluff and Marie do some explaining, and—

"Though long in running time, the film does not lag, nor does it resort to irrelevant material. You'll enjoy this picture at the Elks this week end."

Bk. of Montreal Crop Report

Canada has reached the actual commencement of the harvesting season with the prospects still good for generally satisfactory crops in every part of the Dominion. In the Prairie Provinces grain is ripening rapidly and it is expected that in Manitoba harvesting will be general next week; in districts where crops are not so far advanced general rains are needed to aid filling.

Although showers have fallen over much of the grain growing area further general rains are needed to aid filling, particularly in Saskatchewan and parts of Alberta. Rust is prevalent in eastern Saskatchewan and in southern, central and northwestern Manitoba, and while some damage has already occurred to susceptible varieties of wheat, weather conditions have retarded its spread and development. Grasshopper damage has increased in southwestern Manitoba and southeastern Saskatchewan. Some serious hail losses have occurred in local areas.

Alberta crops are maturing rapidly, with prospects satisfactory except in the northwest and a portion of the southeast, where drought persists. Fortunately last week's extreme heat has been broken by general light rain and lower temperature, but further rain is required to properly fill wheat. Saskatchewan—While crops generally are rapidly approaching maturity moisture conditions in many districts are inadequate and good rains are required to prevent further deterioration. In the north central area rain is urgently needed. Rust is threatening the east of the province. Grasshoppers are active in the southeast.

Manitoba crops are ripening rapidly and wheat harvesting will be general this week. Rust infection is heavy in central and southern districts and will reduce yields. Grasshoppers damaging to some extent. Hail losses in local areas.

Minerals Used Ceramic Industry

The various minerals used in the ceramic industries and their particular application are discussed by Norman B. Davis, Managing Director, Canadian Flint and Spar Company, Limited, in his paper appearing in the July issue of the Bulletin of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

After setting out the importance of the mineral in our every day life the author deals in turn with clays, quartz, felspar, limestone, gypsum, magnesite, talc, salt, distension, basite and a list of miscellaneous minerals, with brief reference to their occurrence in Canada. He presents tabulated data on the approximate percentage of the minerals and mineral products used in the more important ceramic industries and gives a list of the more important chemicals prepared from minerals for use in the ceramic industry.

WEDDING BELLS

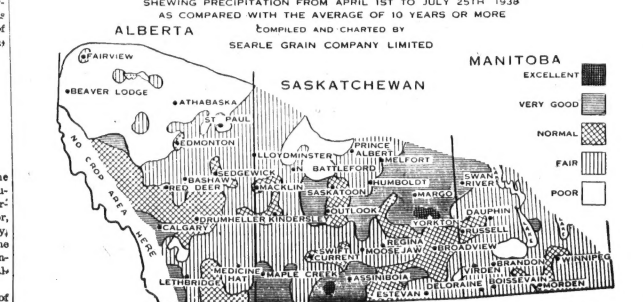

MILNER-SIBDAR
A quiet wedding took place at St. Stephen's Church, Edmonton, on July 25th, when Miss Kitty Kirby became the bride of Mr. Maurice Milner, both of Wainwright. The Rev. J. C. Matthews officiated and the happy couple are enjoying a short honeymoon.

No Fall Election or Commons Session

Neither a fall election nor a fall session of parliament may be expected this year, Premier King has declared in Ottawa, unless there occurs some eventuality of which there is at present no sign, nor in his opinion any likelihood.

Premier King laughed at reports an election might be called on the issue of the pending trade agreement with the U.S. "It will be as good as a you gentlemen if there is an election this year," he said to newspapermen.

SEARLE REPORT OF PRECIPITATION OVER THE PRAIRIE PROVINCES FROM APRIL 1 TO JULY 25.

The map printed above shows the distribution of precipitation that has occurred over the Prairie Provinces from April 1st to July 25th, 1938.

In Alberta, while there are large areas that are normal and better than normal, it will be seen that there are also large areas that are somewhat less than normal, and in the northern part of the province parts that are decidedly less than normal. The whole province, on the average, shows that 63% of the normal rainfall has occurred from April 1st to July 25th.

In Saskatchewan the areas with less than normal rainfall are smaller than in Alberta, and here we find that 90% of normal rainfall has occurred. Manitoba makes the poorest showing of the three provinces, very few parts having normal rainfall. On the average only 74% of the normal rainfall has occurred from April 1st to July 25th.

Taking the three Prairie Provinces together and combining autumn and growing season precipitation, and weighing for wheat acreage, the rainfall records reveal that the total moisture condition on July 25th was 85% or normal, as compared with 73% at the same time last year.

88% of normal rainfall usually would provide a very fine crop. Unfortunately, while the rain has grown the crop, rust and grasshoppers have taken a toll, the amount of which can only be determined at harvest time.

Annual R.C. Picnic Pleasing Gathering

Last Wednesday afternoon saw a good gathering of members of Blessed Sacrament church and their friends at the annual picnic which was held at Mott Lake in the National park.

The weather was ideal for the occasion and a real merry time was enjoyed in games, races and such-like by both old and young.

At the supper hour the big party sat down to the wonderful spread for which the ladies of this church are noted, and the assistants at the long, heavily-laden tables were truly kept busy.

Swimming, playing (yes, and we are told, even a little sweetheating) while away the time and the local orchestra started their sweet strains, to the tunes of which a handful of those attending danced till the early morning hours.

Local Young Couple Joined in Wedlock

A quiet wedding was solemnized by the vicar, Rev. F. Rickthaus, at St. Thomas (Ang.) church, on Monday morning in the presence of a fair congregation, when Adelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Dundas, was wedded to Jeffrey, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor. Both the contracting parties are life-long residents of Wainwright.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, the happy couple leaving for a short honeymoon immediately after.

LOOK at the RECORD OF CASE THRESHERS AND COMBINES

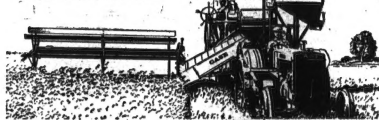

"My Case thresher has threshed every year since 1904, and if it continues as it has in the past, it will do me for the rest of my farming days," writes W. L. Burnham of Saskatchewan. "I have found it very light running, easy to operate, and it always did a good clean job."

Ever since 1842 Case threshers have been famous for simplicity, easy operation, clean work, light running, long life and low upkeep. Case combines have the same sturdy quality, many of the same features, and similar records of superiority. No wonder there are so many Case threshers and combines in use throughout the Dominion.

Don't take chances of delays or wasted grain with an old, worn thresher or an ordinary combine. Go to your Case dealer now and see how much time, money, and power you can save with a modern Case machine. Whether you prefer a thresher or a combine, Case gives you a close-combing all-steel cylinder and concaves... non-clogging steel-finger grates... steel-grid straw rack... air-lift cleaning... simpler adjustments for all crops and conditions.

MAKING CANADA A Better Place in Which to Live

A Series of Letters from Distinguished Canadians on Vital Problems Affecting the Future Welfare of Canada

Specialty Written for Canadian Weekly: Newspapers Association

LETTER No. 14

Dear Editor:

The opportunity you have given me of offering some suggestions which might be helpful to members of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association is very much appreciated.

I have discussed your letter with Rev. C. E. Sibson, General Secretary of the Social Service Council of Canada, and with Mr. Frank Chamberlain, Press Representative of the United Church of Canada. As a result of this conference I make the undersigned suggestions:

It is our feeling that if the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association would like to do something really worthwhile, "to make Canada a better place in which to live and work," it would be advisable to pool their efforts and attack the task with some collective plan.

The Association might consider the appointment of a Committee of three or four to consult with recognized authorities in the problems to be dealt with with the purpose in view of establishing a Syndicate Service which would provide every one of the 600 editors simultaneously with authoritative, timely, brightly-written articles.

We feel that there are four outstanding endeavors to which the editors of weekly newspapers might well devote their attention:

- (1) Consideration of outstanding social problems:
 - A. Health Insurance.
 - B. Unemployment.
 - C. Maternal and infant mortality.
 - D. Problems of the home.
 - E. Education.
 - F. Economic Organization.
 - G. Vocational Guidance.
 - H. Recreation, etc.
- (2) News concerning the broader activities of all the Churches.
- (3) Problems of health—mental and physical.
- (4) International problems.

We believe that it would be possible for a Committee of the Association to form a Syndicate Service that would provide each one of the newspapers with perhaps two articles a week on two of these four subjects (alternating them).

Mr. Sibson tells me that he would be very glad to confer with such a committee from the Association and he would be glad to assist in the preparation of at least 26 articles on the first question—Consideration of Outstanding

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

HOLIDAY PRECAUTIONS

The annual summer holiday is designed to improve the health of you and your children. Care should be taken that proper benefit of this holiday is gained and that its benefit is not impaired by accident or preventable disease. The following precautions are eminently worth while.

1. Be sure that the water supply is safe. If you are not satisfied with the character of this supply, boil the water. Cool and aerate it by pouring the water from one jug to another. Also ask the Provincial Health Department for information as to a practical method of purifying water. Some provinces furnish a simple apparatus for this purpose at cost. An additional precaution, in the use of anti-typhoid vaccine which also is supplied by the Health Department.
2. Do not take unnecessary risks when swimming. Learn the simplicity of the Schafer method of artificial respiration and teach your kids how to practice it on one another.
3. Take a small first-aid kit with you. There will always be burns, bites and scratches to be dressed.
4. If you are camping out, extinguish all fires before you leave camp.
5. One of the most important precautions is that you and your children avoid the use of raw milk. If pasteurized milk is not available heat the milk in a double boiler to 145 degrees F. Maintain this temperature for 30 minutes. Then rapidly cool the milk to 40 or 50 degrees F. and keep it at this temperature until it is used. Pasteurization kills all the "disease germs" in the milk. The use of milk so treated does not injure the qualities of the product. It may save your child from a host of milk-borne diseases.

People living in cities where milk is pasteurized are likely to take it for granted and to forget that in many areas where the significance of pasteurization is not realized much raw milk is still sold. When going on holidays always enquire as to whether milk supplied you is pasteurized or not. For the sake of your health and your children's health insist on pasteurized milk only.

ing Social Problems.

On the question of Health, we feel that it would be possible to ask for four articles each from: (1) The Canadian Medical Association; (2) The Canadian National Committee for Mental Hygiene; (3) The Canadian Tuberculosis Association.

It is also our belief that the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association could do a fine piece of work by promoting better understanding between the city industrial worker and the rural worker. We feel that the question of understanding between East and West—between nationalities—between different races—and people of different creeds—is one demanding larger consideration.

I believe that concerted effort on behalf of the Association, rather than by individual editors (who have not the time or the material on hand) would bring better results.

Yours very truly,

PETER BRUCE,

Moderator, The United Church of Canada.

FEDERAL PROGRAM

FOR PARK ROADS

The Dominion Government is spending nearly $500,000 on Alberta highways this year, greater part of which is for the national parks, according to information given by James A. McKinnon, M.P. for West Edmonton, to officials of the Alberta Motor Association.

While the Dominion has granted only $75,000 to the province to assist in hard surfacing the Waterton Lakes park to Banff highway, Mr. McKinnon says that the Dominion is making a large outlay otherwise to improve park roads, which will be utilized for motor touring purposes.

Major federal expenditure in Alberta this year is $300,000, which it is hoped will be sufficient to complete the Jasper-Lake Louise scenic highway.

At last reports, this highway was only 23 miles short of being completed. It is expected that work will be rushed this year so that the road, running through some of the most wonderful scenery on this continent, will be opened to general traffic in 1939.

The Dominion also is spending $100,000 on hard surfacing highways in the Banff national park, including the highway that runs to Radium, B.C.

COURSE AT JASPER IN FINE CONDITION

Jasper Park—Never before in the history of golf in the Canadian Rockies has a course looked more beautiful or appeared in such grand condition as does the Jasper course, over which the annual annual Totem Pole tournament is played. This year the tournament commences September 4 with players of international repute competing in the event. Because of favorable weather conditions the grass on the fairways and greens came through much earlier than formerly and owing to the good start it will be in perfect condition for the annual Totem Pole tournament.

As a test of golf the course at Jasper Park Lodge is looked upon as decidedly fair and interesting. It measures 6,580 yards from the championship tee and is made up of five "one shotters," ten par four holes and three par five holes. Three of the short holes come in the first nine, the fourth, seventh and ninth. The other two are the twelfth and the internationally famous "Bad Baby," the 15th. An outstanding feature of these short holes is their beautiful character and no two are alike.

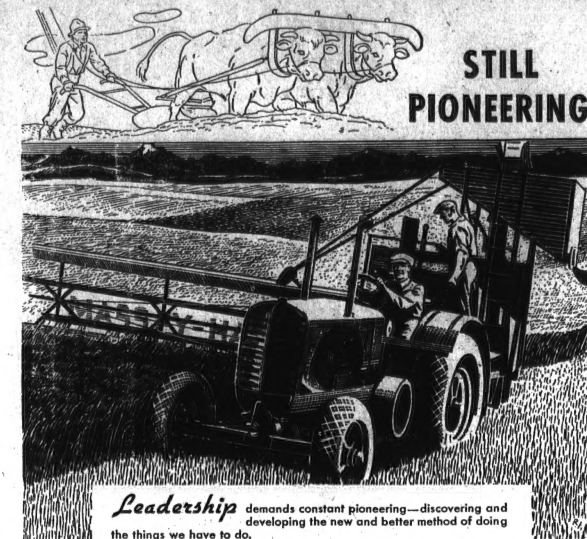

Already reservations have been made for the annual Totem Pole golf week, September 4, and the event promises to be the most successful ever held, which covers a lot of ground.

Nancy Hart's HOME NEWS

It's no longer necessary for poor, frantic females to go wading through the mire from end to end and below they finally find an inoffensive little lipstick. The cure-all is a new little bag with its fasteners that glide on a thin gold chain. It is rubber-lined for perfect cleanliness, and into it four and a half by five inch pouch you can put an amazing amount of make-up necessities. A larger size, called the tourist case, adds to the comfort of travel.

Pastel tones in general are foreseen for summer, and among them is a soft shade of pale faded pink which is sponsored by all the leading milliners. This color is called old pink by certain houses and ashes of roses by other designers. The greens are represented by soft tones of reseda.

STILL PIONEERING

Leadership demands constant pioneering—discovering and developing the new and better method of doing the things we have to do.

Time was when the introduction of a new implement was a memorable and historic event, but these were the early days in the application of mechanics to farming operations. Today, changes succeed each other with greater rapidity and even the most revolutionary innovations are accepted with little acclaim.

Not in any period of the ninety years of Massey-Harris history has such skill been employed in the designing and developing of machines for the farm as there is today. The Company's engineers, in their extensive field experiments, are constantly testing new ideas and developing, under actual conditions, machines and attachments specifically suited to the requirements of the territory for which they are intended.

Thus, whether it be a one-handed walking plow to be used by a native, and even perhaps drawn by natives, on the South African veldt; a power-driven mower to cope with the luxuriant growth of grass on an English meadow, or the One-Way Disc Seeder developed to help the farmer on the prairies of Western Canada combat soil drifting, it is the result of definite scientific research by the Company's field engineers.

And in the motorized mechanization that is taking place in farming operations, Massey-Harris is in the forefront, still pioneering in bringing to farmers the latest developments in Tractors, Combines and other power equipment.

The World of Wheat

H. G. L. Strange.

Director, Research Department,
Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

"I sure will know this fall which of the new varieties of wheat is best for my farm," said a good friend to me a few days ago. "How will you know that?" I asked him. "Well," he said,
"I've seeded two acres to 'Thrasher', Renown, Apex, Renard and Red Bob, and I'll compare the yields of each with my main crop of Marquis. Then next year I'll sow the seed on a larger acreage from whichever of the two acres proves to be best."

"That's a fine experiment," I answered him, "but don't for goodness sake use next year any of the seed from those two acre plots, for you'll find it very difficult, if not impossible, to harvest, thresh and win all those different varieties and not get them badly mixed."

"From my own experience in seed growing, and from observing the work of hundreds of our best seed growers," I said, "I advise you to haul to the elevator the grain from all those two acre plots, and then next winter to purchase some good pure Registered or Certified seed of the variety you finally choose. Sow this good seed on clean land and then you will have a real good start with the variety you like."

"Mixtures of varieties," I told my friend, "are certainly one of the commonest causes of low grades, hence of serious money losses to farmers."

Following factors have tended to raise prices: Heat damages spring crop in Russia and Bulgaria—North American rust reports increase—Argentine corn still making below normal progress—United Kingdom buys large quantity of Roumanian wheat—Active European demand for American corn—Flax stocks ahead for Europe are small.

Following factor have tended to lower prices: Russia and Roumania offering wheat more freely—Roumania announces export bounty—Indian autumn food grain crops have good start—French wheat estimates increased—Wheat crop in Turkey expected to exceed 1937 crop—U.S. government estimate wheat crop July 1st at 967 million—Prairie moisture conditions improve.

BOTANICAL NOTES FOR AUGUST

August has been truly called the month of gold; the aureate month of the blazing month!

A lavender haze hangs in the air on these velvet nights. Under a grape-colored sky crammed with dim stars the trees stand still as those of a submarine forest. But these stars are soon to be chased away by the savage rays of the sun as he rises—shoots to his zenith and hangs merciless—a brass plaque with a hairy outline in a vivid sky. Later the hot and quivering air seems filled with scintillating gold dust as the parched earth gives back its shimmering heat to a colossal old-gold moon.

On the farm are boundless oceans of waving golden grain, redolent of the Crown of the Year. There, too, are great fields of corn tossing their pinnated heads like shyly audacious old-time knights, proud in the possession of their golden ladies, the corn.
It seems these haughty cavaliers are trampling conquered hosts as the enormous golden orbs of the pumpkins crawl and squirm at their feet.

And there is more gold; for the world is ablaze with golden bloom.
Highland, plain, woodland, swamp and lake alike are bursting with a plethora of floral glory. It is quite true that all is not gold that glitters, but sometimes glitter may mean more than mere glitter, as we shall see.

On the lakes and ponds is the large yellow water-lily, perhaps the most which Longfellow had in mind when Heaven's name.

"Planted on the river
Like a yellow leaf in autumn
Like a yellow water-lily."

The flowers look like enormous floating buttercups. Not being sweetly scented, they are usually left in peace; but there are some people who (it is said) eat the seeds and roots; and who claim the seeds taste like those of brown corn, and the roots after long boiling, like sheep-liver!

These sun-shed golden disks with flashing rays, called Sunflowers, are, as well as being ornamental, useful to man. One authority says that the seeds of some species were parched and ground into meal to make bread, considered equal to corn bread. The thickened, tuber-like roots of the Giant Sunflower and the Jerusalem Artichoke are boiled and eaten like potatoes.

The much-maligned rose-thistles and their kind to August. The perennial species is a hardy plant, but a noxious weed owing to its large running roots. Here indeed is a case of futile gluttony! But it has a first cousin—the annual rose thistle—which has harmful where leaves are according to Britton and Brown, used as greens and salad.

And so these drowsy, droning dogs gently dissolve into another season beloved for cooler nights and sweet repose; when the mellow increase of decline of summer reminds us that there will soon be much ado again with all the bustle and bustle of Dame Nature's beneficent season—the harvest.

SEED-BORNE DISEASES AND TESTED REMEDIES

Of late much publicity has been given the remarkable results achieved by Mr. G. A. Scott and his associates in the Division of Botany and Plant Pathology, Ottawa, in the use of organic mercury fungicides for the control of seed-borne diseases of cereals and other crops. That the new improved organic mercury dust will control bunt of wheat, covered smut and stripe of barley and the smuts of oats practically 100%, is now fairly generally known. But Mr.
Scott's investigations have gone further, and he has demonstrated that the same treatment will suppress root and stem rot which menace the well-being of many crops, both by impairing the germinating power of the seed and preventing the normal development of the seedling. On display in Mr. Scott's laboratory are numerous specimens of plants showing the typical symptoms of infections by various diseases, also cultures of germinating seeds, untreated and treated with the new improved fungicide, the untreated covered with masses of disease spores, the treated clean and clear with healthy, robust germination.

With this picture impressed on his mind, Mr. B. Leslie Emile paid a visit recently to the new research laboratories at Minquedale, near Wilmington, Delaware, where the testing of these organic mercury dusts proceeds.

Besides those whose work is already proven, many other substances possessing fungicidal properties are under observation and not one is released to the public until it has passed successfully the most exacting tests, usually a process of years. While mostly the fungicides are basically organic mercury preparations, their chemical combinations are varied according to the class of plant the seed of which is to be treated.

The building at Minquedale contains laboratory, greenhouse, workrooms, implement and storage sheds and stands in a 26-acre plot of land which serves for field experiments. A product may remain in the laboratory or greenhouse stage for years before it is considered worthy of trial in the field. At the time of Mr. Emile's visit in May several acres of peas and four acres of cotton were coming along. It is of interest to note that for cotton seed the ethyl mercury phosphate dust has proved so far the most efficient disinfectant. This is the same substance used, at a rate of one-half ounce per bushel, for the treatment of seed grain in Canada, and one which is becoming increasingly popular with grower of fall wheat in Ontario.

ANOTHER FOR THE BOOK—PAGE REPLY!

When a house-painter approached the depositor's window of a Salem bank last week, he carried two tin buckets which did not contain paint, no, they were filled to the brim with exactly 245 pounds of silver dollars which he had saved since the depression began in 1929.

The money comprised a considerable number of dollar coins (3,500 to be exact) and in addition to this, the painter presented for deposit currency amounting to $3,200.

The silver was not deposited at the moment but was placed in one of the bank vaults to be recounted. When the depression started this couple began putting aside every dollar which was not actually needed to run their household, and their offering was the grand result!

Truly, "Many a mickle makes a muckle!"

With the crop conditions which prevail this year, the ability to combine more grain in a given time will be a boon to any farmer. That he can do so in Alberta, while reducing costs to almost one-third, with a "Caterpillar" Diesel Tractor has been definitely proved by the Hutterian Brethren Ewelme Colony at Glenwoodville, Alberta.

The Colony's records, (reproduced in part above) show that after changing to a "Caterpillar" Diesel Tractor operating under the same conditions and for the same number of hours, the same crew was able to combine 5,000 more bushels of grain... and do so at a 65% saving in the total cost of fuel and lubrication.

The same saving is available to you regardless of what method of harvesting you follow, for "Caterpillar" Diesel Tractors are built in five sizes, to meet every farming requirement.

BRUCE BARTON Says:

Go Slow for Speed

A short while after the Pittsburgh lord visited the president of a company which has three plants, all in the flooded area. I expected to find him dictating memoranda, juggling long distance calls, and jumping through all sorts of business hoops. Instead, he was calm and unhurried.

"Do you know the secret of making fast progress in an emergency?" he asked. "It is to slow down. When men try to rush they always stumble."

"The superintendent of one of our plants phoned me that his force was working day and night and would have the wheels turning in a week. I told him: 'Stop the night work. Go around and tell the men to take it easy. Plan to start in three weeks then you may make it in ten days. But if you try to rush things the men will dry the motors out too fast and get them all gummed up. You will be in trouble all along the line. It's vital that we get going at the earliest possible moment. Therefore, slow down.'"

There come times in every business man's life when so many appointments and pieces of work are shot in from all directions that it seems as if there can't possibly be hours enough in the day. A good scheme on such occasions is to leave the office, sit down in a quiet place, and make up a list of the various jobs in the order of their importance. This may use up an hour or more, but instead of being time wasted it makes all the other hours about ten times as effective.

Most of our major mistakes in national policy have come from doing things under pressure. Prohibition and dozens of other reforms that were to settle big questions forever were rushed through at break-neck speed. They proved no good. The Federal Reserve Bank was the result of about twelve years of study and debate and has stood the test. I am in favor of rapid progress; that's why I think we should go slow.

Big Ideas Plentiful

A young man recently returned from Central America and when asked about it replied: "I had visited a whole lot of a proposition, but when I got there I found it meant several years of the toughest kind of work. No people but Indians and half-breeds, no comforts, no pleasures, nothing but back through jungles, fighting poisonous insects and reptiles. I got all I could stand of it in a couple of months."

The unfortunate fact about this particular gentleman is that he has made several journeys into various Central American of opportunity and has found mosquitoes and half-breeds too numerous in each case. A cursory examination of his business record reveals a list of at least a dozen different jobs.

Another thing which has handicapped him has been his vast fertility in ideas. "He can sit in his chair almost any day and think up a scheme by which some big corporation could make a lot of money. He means the fact that he never has been able to get to Henry Ford."

I don't know what your experience in business has been, but it is my observation that ideas are about the cheapest of all commodities. The Patent Office in Washington has issued worthless patents on millions of them. Every executive gets hundreds of letters and requests for interviews from people with IDEAS. But the supply of men who can execute ideas and make money out of them is pitifully small.

"Monty!" she cried in excitement, "you darling!"

"And then came the ever-feminine query: 'But what am I going to wear?' 'I like us just the way we are—and they'll have to like us the same way,' asserted Monty, smiling down at her. 'I'll dust off the shine and be with you in a minute!' was all Sunny could say."

As they left arm in arm, their first step into the crisp evening air seemed to herald a changed world—at least for them. In a trice they were seated in the long, shiny black car. The motor purred, and they were off, on the happiest evening of their lives.

"We're going the way we are all right," asserted Monty. "If they can't take us this way—they won't take us at all!"

"Getting a little independent, aren't you?" bantered Sunny.

"Why not?" countered Monty. "Nobody seems to be over-solicitous about us!"

In a trice both Monty and Sunny had stepped into the Mayors' luxurious motor and were on their way to the eventful celebration. Monty was evidently stirred with a double emotion. This was his personal triumph—recognition of his victory over the elements in a round the world flight.

He had been challenged by mishap and tonight he would show them all that Monty Wallace always landed on his feet.

Sunny snuggled closer and sought the comfort of Monty's arm. They both looked curiously out of place in the richly upholstered limousine. Sunny's chic sport frock was an excellent companion to Monty's flying top. But it was evening—and they were bound for an array of white ties and low-necked evening gowns.

Monty looked down at Sunny. He smiled.

"Fraid?" he asked.

"Not a bit!" came Sunny's stout answer. "And you?"

"What was your father's name?"

"HE'S STILL SORE 'CAUSE I DIDN'T PASS LAST SPRING—WAS KEPT BACK!"

to others. Miraculously they found themselves at the banquet table. The Mayor raised his hand for silence.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began—while the buzz of conversation continued. "Ladies and gentlemen!" the Mayor repeated.

The confusion subsided. The Mayor addressed the throng again.

"This is a very informal gathering," he assured them. "Because I know you're all hungry—let's have the chef first and then spend the rest of the evening honoring our hero!"

It seemed that the Mayor, shrewd judge of human nature that he was, knew his audience. (At the banquet proceeded. As the entrées were served, Sunny, who sat next to Monty, suddenly whispered.

"Monty!—There's Nat and Jimmy—they've just arrived!"

"Too bad they missed such a delicious meal!" was Monty's offhand comment.

"I don't think they'll miss it," corrected Sunny, "they're coming straight for those two places on the other side of the Mayor!"

"Good!" exclaimed Monty. "It's great to have all the old friends together."

Then Sunny and Monty were drawn away from each other by the small talk of their dinner companions. It seemed ages later that Sunny found a way to turn her attention to Monty again. No sooner had she begun to speak when her voice suddenly rose.

"Look!" she cried and motioned to a far table.

It was the woman, Vivian Morgan. Sunny was leering but the presence of his self-assured spouse seemed to cause little surprise for Monty.

"I told you she'd be here!" said Sunny, her eyes fastened on the far distant figure.

"That's great!—now we're all here," was Monty's dry reply.

Dessert and coffee heralded the beginning of speechmaking and shortly the Mayor was rapping for order.

Next, Monty found himself acknowledging applause. Words seemed to help being focussed on the woman in the distance. He was conscious too of Natalie and Jimmy. He sensed something in the air. What he knew not, but that the evening would be full of events he was sure.

"I should have rehearsed this speech while I was dodging clouds over Alaska," began Monty with a breezy smile, "but maybe some of the language I used then wouldn't fit in tonight!"

"And I had known we were going to have such a good time at this end of the line!"

"On the contrary—I'm looking forward to it!"

Monty offered Sunny a cigarette. He applied to match to both.

"We should be there soon," Monty commented.

"Monty!" she cried in excitement, "you darling!"

"And then came the ever-feminine query: 'But what am I going to wear?'"

THE WILSON FLY PAD CO., HAMILTON, ONT.

"Clark Street Kate," came the verification, "you know—she's that Chicago snake-down artist that gave us the jump a couple years back!"

"Fancy meeting you here, Kate," was the Mayor's sarcastic greeting, "suppose you're here by invitation?"

"Invitation—nothing!" came Vivian's indignant denial. "I pay for what I get—and you'd be surprised what five bucks can buy these days!"

The Mayor turned to the Chief. "What's the charge?"

By this time Monty and Sunny were standing close to each other. Natalie and Jimmy, with Mack Hanlon and Sunny's father, were opposite. The latter two were unaware of the drama in the situation of the other four.

The Chief addressed the Mayor.

"Well, we have a charge of blackmail on the books, but it's never been pressed. I remember it was against Butch McCook, the gangster that was in Alcatraz now. So I guess it won't do much good to hook her on that one."

"Anything else?" questioned the Mayor.

"Disrespectful conduct here, and resisting an officer!"

Monty stepped forward.

"May I have a word, Chief—and you Honor?"

"Of course!" came the reply.

"Seeing that you haven't anything really serious against her, why not let her go—that is, if she promises to leave town and not get into mischief."

Natalie, Jimmy and Sunny chorused their affirmation. Sunny was especially strong in urging the woman's release.

"Looks like you've got some pretty influential friends, Kate," observed the Mayor. "What do you say, Chief—let her go?"

"Okay—if everybody says so—I'll discuss the charge of disorderly conduct with an officer—and call it quits."

Sunny threw her arms around Monty's neck.

"You're safe—I'm safe!" she cried happily.

Natalie and Jimmy stepped forward.

"Good work, Monty—we're glad to see everything turn out."

The Mayor and the Chief looked at each other with a puzzled expression.

"What's going on here—do you two know each other?" His Honor interrogated.

"We're old friends!" insisted Monty. Sunny chimed in.

"She made me realize that I loved Monty after all!"

"And if she hadn't done that—I wouldn't have got Nat to promise to marry me!" returned Jimmy.

"And then Monty and I would have gone on kidding each other and goodness knows where it would all have ended!" explained Natalie.

The Mayor and the Chief were thoughtful for a moment. They turned to Jake Marion and Mack Hanlon. There could be no explanation from that quarter.

"I don't get this," faltered the Mayor—"how do you mean she made you all realize you loved somebody else instead of—oh, bother! What's all this about!"

"This woman—Viv—I mean, Kate accused me of being her husband," ventured Monty.

"Are you?" demanded the Chief.

"Of course he isn't!" replied Sunny indignantly—"he's going to be mine!"

"So that does it! I can marry Nat, he told her, he was engaged to Mont before Viv—I mean Kate—said she was his wife!" explained Jimmy, none too clearly.

"Hold on now!" the Mayor shouted. "Let's get this straight. Do you want to marry Mont Wallace?"

"I sure do," spoke up Sunny.

"And you, Jimmy Hanlon—you want to marry this girl?"

"I want Natalie more than anything else in the world!" came Jimmy's firm assurance.

"And how about you?" asked His Honor, turning to Vivian, now known as Clark Street Kate, the Shake-Down Queen.

"I don't get married—yet," was Kate's rueful reply, "my husband is doing a two-to-fourteen stretch in Stateville and he won't give me a divorce!"

"That's enough!" cut in the Mayor. "Now if you two couples will line up here, for about two minutes, we'll get the matrimonial part of this party over and start in where we left off!"

"Why you old darling!" cried Natalie.

"I wouldn't have it any other way!" assured Jimmy.

"Isn't it just perfect?" was all Sunny could say as she smiled into Mont's eyes.

"Happy landings!" cried Monty's gay reply.

Mr. Wall's prize pickerel tipped the scales at 10 lbs 6 ounces, and 10 1/2 inches in length and 17 1/2 in girth.

1 cup whipping cream

Blend sweetened condensed milk and water thoroughly. Add peaches which have been crushed and sweetened with sugar. (The average peaches require about 1/4 cup sugar.)

Chill. Whip cream to custard-like consistency and fold into chilled mixture. Pour into freezing pan. Place in freezing unit. After mixture is about half frozen remove from refrigerator. Scrape mixture from sides and bottom of pan. Beat until smooth but not until melted. Smooth out and replace in freezing unit until frozen for serving. Serves 12.

PINEAPPLE AND CRESS SALAD
1 pkg. lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup chopped watercress
1 cup shredded pineapple
1/2 cup chopped maraschino cherries

Dissolve gelatin in one cup of hot water, then cool and allow to set until thick. Divide the mixture into thirds. Add the shredded pineapple to one third and pour into freezing tray of the refrigerator. To the second third add the chopped cherries and pour over the pineapple mixture. To the last third add the chopped watercress and pour over the cherries.

Leave in the refrigerator until firm enough to cut into slices and serve on crisp lettuce with mayonnaise.

SURPRISE FRUIT PUDDING
Filling, but not heavy. "Surprise Fruit Pudding" is grand to top off your dinner any summer night. Here's how you do it:

spunge or angel cake

as Clark Street Kate, the Shake-Down Queen.

"I don't get married—yet," was Kate's rueful reply, "my husband is doing a two-to-fourteen stretch in Stateville and he won't give me a divorce!"

"That's enough!" cut in the Mayor. "Now if you two couples will line up here, for about two minutes, we'll get the matrimonial part of this party over and start in where we left off!"

"Why you old darling!" cried Natalie.

"I wouldn't have it any other way!" assured Jimmy.

"Isn't it just perfect?" was all Sunny could say as she smiled into Mont's eyes.

"Happy landings!" cried Monty's gay reply.

C.N.R. EMPLOYEE LANDS A WINNER

Winnipeg—When Harry Wall, a Canadian National sheet metal worker, of Winnipeg, cast a plug bait into the waters below Whitemouth Falls, on the Winnipeg River, he pulled out $26 in new fishing equipment. It was one of the prizes offered by a Winnipeg newspaper for fish or catfish appearing exceeding certain weights, and caught in the fresh water lakes and streams of Manitoba and parts of western Ontario. Mr. Wall's prize pickerel tipped the scales at 10 lbs 6 ounces, and 10 1/2 inches in length and 17 1/2 in girth.

The Family DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D., F.R.C.

THINGS TO DO—AND NOT TO DO

The suffering man or woman is generally willing to grasp at the straw which promises even the slightest alleviation. It may be an inflamed and swollen joint, a throbbing, agonizing, inflamed nerve, a passing calculus, or the pain of peptic ulcer. Local applications afford a measure of relief worth going after, besides keeping the mind occupied so far as possible on the work in hand and away from the suffering.

There are many forms of local medication, but there are only a few drugs that penetrate the skin and reach the affected part. One had better leave the local use of poisons to the physician. Liniments containing ether, chloroform, carbolic acid, and such like, act as local anesthetics, the two former must be carefully kept from flame, as they ignite easily. Ointments containing menthol are cooling and soothing to inflamed surfaces. The use of vasoline for the incorporation of drugs, forms an ointment that does not enter the pores as a rule.

Hot packs, either wet or dry, have their special uses. They expand the small vessels, and permit an increased flow of blood through the part; this increase of new (and pure) blood may remove the damming of the passages inflamed. Hot packs should be of short duration, and frequently renewed—as hot as can be borne is not too warm.

Cold packs must be used with judgment. A fevered, "pounding" headache may be relieved temporarily by cold packs, while the cause is being attended to. I have always been timid about putting cold packs about the throats of children in acute affections; in fact, I never do it. Cold draws blood away from the part, by contracting the vessels.

Think what this wonderful offer will mean in enjoyment throughout the whole year for yourself and your family. Magazines of your own choice and this newspaper, packed with stories, timely articles, helpful departments and colorful illustrations. Now is your chance.

Big Business in Miniature

(Ray Giles in Readers' Digest)

America has 900 corporations run by 13,000 boys and girls, 16 to 21 years of age. Miniature, they are nonetheless complete—from janitor to president, headmaster to success, raw products to finished articles. There is none of your "playing store" about these enterprises. Young directors pay rent, wages and dividends; the products are sold on a quality basis in the open market. The companies afford ideal training in all phases of business effort.

It seems surprising that these concerns have been operating 17 years with scarcely any public recognition. In 1919 Horace A. Moses, head of the Stratmore Paper Company, realized that, with all our vaunted educational system, no provision was made for teaching youth the habits and methods by which they could earn their bread. Why not, he asked himself, help a group of boys and girls form a small company of their own, and learn business by actual experience? Would not the educational value be enormous?

The results have proved the soundness of Mr. Moses' idea as well as repaid him in satisfaction for the $250,000 he put into it for the purpose of organizing and guiding—not subsidizing—the Junior Achievement Companies. The late Theodore M. Vail was so much interested when Mr. Moses called on him that he volunteered another $250,000. Calvin Coolidge heartily endorsed the idea. Rotary raised $50,000 for the work starting in Springfield, Mass. It spread rapidly through New England. It found warm soil in New York, where there are now 55 companies and made its way as far west as Colorado.

The range of activities was remarkably broad. One of the most successful companies, the Oddity Shop at Flushing, New York, started off working in iron, but this demand was soon met and the group shifted to wood. They have adjusted their program repeatedly to changing requirements. Stock originally priced at 50 cents a share is now quoted at $1.15. Last year this company paid a 10 percent dividend to some 60-odd stockholders, and bonuses to all members.

There are companies in which boys and girls work together. In one the boys make chairs, and the girls upholster them. There are all-girl companies. One in New York makes a roomy-sleeved garment to protect the clothes of children who dribble their cereal or spinach. Another turns out a cork mat to put under children's dishes to save linen. Other products include toys, desk pads, ash trays, cigarette cases, books, maps, match holders, purses, stickers for flower beds, weather vane, door stops, paper knives, sugar and cream sets, rings and brooches.

The members of one all-girl company work in a large insurance office. They wanted to broaden their business horizon. They specialize in scamp clasp of catatin, a new plastic which comes in 1800 different colors. Most of these are carved with the customer's initials and sold to fellow employees. The members of another girls' company are all of Italian descent. They find crosses carved of catatin their best selling item, 108 being ordered recently in a single week. Suppose we are a group of youngsters who want to start a company. We may be in high school or employed in business. Perhaps we belong to a church club and feel that something is lacking in our program. By writing headquarters, we tap the cumulative experience of hundreds of other companies, get advice and forms that will be invaluable as we proceed. There are 15 of us—not more. With us are three grownups: a business man who has promised to sponsor the group and act as general adviser, a crafts leader—often a high school manual training teacher, and a sales counsel. Officers are chosen first—president, treasurer, production manager, advertising man and secretary. We decide to build bird houses. A name for our company is decided on, and we come to the question of choosing a factory site. One of the boys goes over the barn that dad would let us use. That would save rent. Another volunteers, "Dad would let us have maybe $50 worth of hardware, just to help the enterprise along."

"We can't take any charity, fellows," the president says. "This is a business, and we don't want to sponge on anybody. We might take that left after looking at other sites, but if we decide on it, we'll pay a reasonable rent. And Hides, we'll study your dad's prices on hardware, and get some other estimates. But we've got to buy what we use. It will be the property of the corporation." Then we arrive at the matter of raising working capital for rent, supplies and tools. At this point, the treasurer produces a neat, printed certificate. "This is a share. It's for 50 cents. We've got to go out and sell it to men who think it's a sound investment. No one can buy over 10 shares—we don't want any one person owning a controlling interest. When we sell enough shares we open up a bank account and we're ready to start."

The workshop is rented, wages rate and the working hours (7 to 9 on Wednesday and Friday nights) are agreed upon, and the corporation is open for business. The immediate production schedule calls for seven bird houses, the design having been worked out with the crafts leader. The first bird house is completed the third evening and the production manager, squinting his eyes critically and conferring with the crafts manager, gives it his okay. There is a brief meeting at the end of the evening to price the article.

Next afternoon the sales manager and an assistant make their first calls on likely prospects. At the end of a month, the corporation has created a taste for bird houses and closed their books with a profit. One customer has ordered three large bird houses made to order. In their rounds the boys have picked up other hints and orders—for flower stickers, knife racks, plate racks, ashtrays, wooden mail boxes. The company finds at the end of its third month, somewhat to the distress of the treasurer, that it must take its profit and invest in new lathes and tools needed to keep up with the demand for new commodities.

What happens in this corporation happens more or less, in 890 other companies. The thing is real. A New England group making iron bridge lamps found the demand for their output such that they now devote full time to the job. The by-products of Junior Achievement are, if possible, more impressive than the products. Each company is small enough to give every member diversified business training. When a man is through at 21 he can tell his prospective employer that he has been janitor, accountant, sales manager and director of a corporation. Many business houses give prizes to job hunters who have had Junior Achievement experience and outlook.

Its value in training character was demonstrated when a gang of juvenile hoodlums had the citizens of a New York suburb in terror. Various noble agencies attempted to reform them, but in vain. One day a social worker by some magic touch, gained their confidence. He in turn asked Junior Achievement headquarters to display sample products. Chatter started. Objects were handled. The boys began to be suspicious. The Junior Achievement leader spoke up. "How would you boys like to make things like that?" They looked at him sharply. They conferred. Their suspicion deepened but only because they wanted eagerly to make things like that and yet considered the possibility fantastic.

That was three years ago. The gang became a corporation, and the leader was the first president. They have developed great skill in pewter ware and the company is doing a land office business, priding itself no less on the beauty and quality of its products than on its good reputation in the community. The gang has discovered that it's more fun to buy and sell than it is to steal.

Hardly less transforming has been the effect of Junior Achievement companies on normally boisterous youngsters. It has taught co-operation and schooled boys and girls in meeting their fellows. A purpose as well as a premium is placed on integrity and accuracy.

Adult assistants derive as much from these sterling enterprises as the little business men who run them. In spite of all the ingenuity and enthusiasm which the youngsters display, they need advice, suggestions for new products and designs, hints about dealing with the public.

Some time ago I talked to a business man who had hired a Junior Achievement graduate. He wanted to know more about the organization and I told him all I could. "The thing is full of possibilities," he ventured. "Why doesn't some company make maps showing how to get to homes in the country? Why doesn't a group work out an organized service for odd jobs, selling their abilities and working on a business-like basis? Why doesn't someone start that?"

"Why don't you?" I asked. Well he did. And this fellow, who seems gruff and has never contributed anything but money to community effort is now the proud father of a Junior Achievement company. He says he gets more kick out of it than he does from his own business.

Many a "tired" business or professional man or equally tired business woman finds this activity bringing a rich new interest into their lives. There is a thrill in sharing with younger enthusiasts your knowledge of business and the crafts. Perhaps in your own neighborhood there's a club or gang who would welcome the chance to incorporate a business of their own. At any rate, it is not surprising that the movement started by Horace A. Moses almost 20 years ago continues to be of vital interest to him and is steadily expanding.

The DIAL REVIEW By Walter Dales

When CICA announced Jack Dawson, of Good Morning Neighbor fame, returned from his well earned holiday it turned out to be an entire staff problem to find him a place of residence. All spare time was devoted to trudging up and down Edmonton streets in an search for the old familiar "Suite to Rent" placard. Jack admits freely that he's immensely relieved to, at last, have found a suitable place. Which all would lead one to believe that the city of Edmonton is daily growing larger and larger. Methinks a town-wide housing scheme wouldn't come amiss.

Speaking of holidays, it's about time to wish Walter Dales the very best on his journey into the mountains. In other words, Walter is going to be busily engaged in announcing the Joe De Courcy dance program from the beautiful Jasper Lodge for the next two weeks. From the depths of your cool retreat, Walter, may you look back fondly upon hotter days at the studio. Walter's duties at CICA are of that publicity chief, a weekly newspaper program, an occasional spot of announcing, and the Spotting of Spots, or in other words the Placing and Timing of the Burgess Bakery Sportscycle from 12:15 noon to 8:45 in the evening and the addition of The Light Up and Listen Club at 8:30 every evening. CICA listeners will find from 8:00 to 9:00 o'clock in the evenings real entertainment.

With the recent change of time in the Burgess Bakery Sportscycle from 12:15 noon to 8:45 in the evening and the addition of The Light Up and Listen Club at 8:30 every evening, CICA listeners will find from 8:00 to 9:00 o'clock in the evenings real entertainment.

A recent addition to the record library are a few late selections by Mart Kenny and his Western Gentlemen, and the program department show quite clearly that they approve of this smooth flowing music.

Rather personal no doubt; but did you or did you not, ever bet on the ponies? The popular answer to that question at the studios right now is a very clear, definite and unmistakable, "NO!"

Saturday morning's popular "Here's Your Number" presentation has revealed many novel ways of securing favorite numbers. And the most popular and commonly used one is some number connected with 730, that being the number on their radio dial of their favorite radio station. Another common way of choosing a number to be played is to add together either the ages or weights of all the members of the family—and certainly no one can deny that these numerous ways of getting numbers result in a real show of variety—nearly every type of music in the library being included in each program.

It's with a certain amount of pride that CICA is able to reveal a number of incidents where their 1000 watts have been of vital assistance to the Long Arm of the Law. Just recently word was received that a series of announcements broadcast for the police department were responsible for a great extent for the speedy apprehension of an Alberta law breaker. Walter Dales, when told of the latest capture, said, "Call it, CICA always gets its man."
